

RAB Response

As a valued RAB customer, keeping you informed is important to us. With growing concern surrounding coronavirus (COVID-19), I want to personally share the steps we are taking to mitigate risks and protect customers and employees, all while maintaining the level of service you've come to expect from RAB.

- We are carefully monitoring the situation and following guidance from the World Health Organization and other health authorities.
- Training events (both at headquarters and elsewhere) and RAB Runner events have been delayed until conditions improve, and we are looking into the possibility of conducting remote "webinar" training events in the interim.
- International travel and visits from international travelers have also been delayed until further notice.
- Travel of RAB field sales managers has been limited to avoid air travel and areas that are experiencing outbreaks.
- Employees who are able to work remotely have already begun doing so, so that we can reduce risk while still ensuring that your service remains uninterrupted.
- We've always taken seriously the cleanliness of our locations, but we are implementing additional measures to clean and disinfect our offices and warehouses more frequently and more intensely.

At this time, all our global operations and supply chains are up and running smoothly.

Thank you for choosing RAB and being a part of our community. Now more than ever, I am reminded of the importance of helping ensure the continued success of your business and living up to our promise to "make it easy".
